

Matt Yetter is the real deal: an old-school, slide guitar-playing, harmonica-tooting country blues artist who characterizes music as “a way of making a connection to everybody all at once”.

Regularly playing old-time, rootsy blues from the 1920s, 30s, and 40s all around Minneapolis, Matt’s created his own niche – a vibe that’s hard to come across anywhere else. Matt has over 12 years of experience as a solo artist and many years performing in ensembles on different fret instruments. He is based in South Minneapolis and performs at many different venues around the area.

Find out more at www.mattyetter.com